Raymond Birn's stimulating update of his classic Crisis, Absolutism, Revolution: Europe and the World, 1648-1789 interweaves political narrative and two vital historical themes: the emergence of the Atlantic world and the socio-economic basis of material life. Deeply thoughtful and clearly argued, Birn's book is one of the best treatments of the early-modern period; and its insight into eastern European events and the interaction of Europeans with the wider world is particularly well-done.

Professor Parker's Europe in Crisis, 1598-1648 was published in 1979, and it is testimony to the success with which he confronted the problems inherent in writing general history that the book soon went through several impressions and revisions. A further tribute is paid in that it is now reissued in a second edition, having been selected by Blackwell as one of their Classic Histories of Europe, a series comprising revised volumes of the older Fontana Histories.
